

The main prerequisite for this course is the good knowledge of linear algebra. In particular you should know linear algebra over the field of complex numbers.

Sometimes I will also consider linear algebra over other fields.

I assume that you have seen the notion of a group. I will try to remind main definitions and results related to this notion.

At the end of the course I am planning to give some examples of representations of compact groups; there I will need some analysis.