

Merging of opinions in a stationary environment

Eran Shmaya

A Bayesian agent learns about the structure of a stationary process from observing past outcomes. We prove that his predictions about the near future become approximately those he would have made if he knew the long run empirical frequencies of the process.

(with Nabil Al-Najjar)